DISTAFF AWARD

Fortescue Metals Group's efforts to make the workplace a better place for women have been recognised by the Australian Mines and Metals Association.

Fortescue won the Australian Women in Resources Alliance Award at an AMMA event in Perth last night.

AMMA chief Steve Knott noted only 13 per cent people in the sector were women, which was "not good enough".

Fortescue boss Nev Power said the company was focused on providing practical solutions to ensure women could grow professionally and had the support and flexibility to have a career and a family.

Other winners included Hannah Campbell of Incitec Pivot (Young Professional Award), Healthgate Resources (Indigenous Employment and Retention Award), Morris Corporation (Training and Development Award) and McDermott Australia (Health and Wellbeing Award).
