

New energy group boss

Broadspectrum chief executive Tom Quinn has been appointed president of the Australian Resources and Energy Group.

Mr Quinn has been on the board since 2017 and takes over as AMMA president from ExxonMobil upstream business development executive Richard Owen.

"Tom has a wealth of industry and leadership experience that will greatly benefit AMMA as we enter our 102nd year of providing support, representation and leadership to employers across this incredibly important and diverse industry," AMMA chief executive Steve Knott said.

The body counts Fortescue's Linda O'Farrell, Sodexo's Johnpaul Dimech and Gold Fields Australasia's Stuart Mathews among its board of directors.